Investment Adviser's Market Commentary

Investment Adviser

John Hussellbee

Global equities were lower over February, although European and UK stocks were positive highlights. Global fixed income was broadly positive, largely due to a contraction in US yields amid elevated investor uncertainty. Commodities were also higher over the month, with gold a significant positive factor once again.

Equity performance so far this year has reflected to some extent a rotation away from the fully priced US equities that performed so well in 2024 – and much of the past decade – into better value areas. European and UK equities, for example, started the year at a valuation discount and buying demand has helped to drive their prices higher. They remain good value despite their relative outperformance so far.

In addition to growing investor uncertainty, the contraction in US yields was partly due to markets having become too pessimistic on rates in January. Economic data in February generally pointed to a slow-down, with inflation sticky but showing few signs of re-acceleration. The market awaits clarity on President Trump's tariffs to decipher the impact on growth and inflation.

High yield debt, which is more exposed to company profits and therefore akin to equities, showed its resilience in the face of slowing growth. We believe high yield is in a sweet spot, where the main Trump policies point to manageable risks, rather than anything existential. In this context, high yield produced very stable returns in February.

Europe ex-UK was the strongest-performing equity region in sterling terms over the month. Europe's defence stocks soared when it became clear that the continent would have to pay substantially more to finance its own security. More warnings from President Trump on tariffs weighed on equities, but more positively, eurozone inflation data just slightly above expectations meant the European Central Bank was still on track to cut rates in March.

UK equities were also in positive territory, while gilts extended their gains so far in 2025 on the back of a global bond rally and the prospect of faster interest rates cuts by the Bank of England (BoE). The BoE was firmly in cutting mode in February and cut the base rate by a quarter-point to 4.50% in a 7-2 vote in which the dissenters preferred a 50bps cut.

US equities delivered the most negative returns over the month in sterling terms of any sub-asset we hold. They declined as gloomy reports signalled that the US economy faced growing challenges from elevated borrowing costs and inflation on top of a cloudy political picture. Data pointed to weakening business and consumer confidence and concerns over the impact of President Trump's tariffs on inflation. The Federal Reserve cut interest rates but forecast a slower pace of monetary policy easing this year. Indeed, there is a growing groundswell of opinion that the next move in rates in the US will need to be up rather than down as was largely anticipated over 2024.

Fund In Focus

Federated Hermes Asia ex-Japan

When investing in Asian equities, blending complementary strategies is essential to balance the region's potential with its inherent risks. Our approach combines the defensive, value-driven philosophy of Federated Hermes Asia ex-Japan with the high-conviction, quality-focused strategy of Fidelity Asia Pacific Opportunities, creating a diversified blend aimed at delivering consistent, long-term returns.

The Federated Hermes Asia ex-Japan fund follows a contrarian strategy, aiming to find quality companies trading at significant discounts to their intrinsic value. Its flexible framework spans the quality spectrum, ensuring investments are underpinned by compelling risk-reward profiles. Capital preservation lies at the core of its approach, focusing on mitigating permanent capital loss rather than reacting to short-term volatility. This discipline is reflected in its largest positions, reserved for opportunities offering low downside risk and strong margins of safety.

In contrast, Fidelity Asia Pacific Opportunities takes a concentrated, high-conviction approach, targeting stable, low-leverage companies with strong return potential. The fund's ability to invest beyond traditional benchmarks allows it to uncover opportunities in under-researched or off-benchmark stocks, delivering a differentiated return profile. With the stock selection process supported by Fidelity's extensive global research network, the fund leverages deep market insights to identify high-conviction opportunities, benefiting from a disciplined and research-driven approach to portfolio construction.

Together, these strategies offer a well-rounded exposure to Asian equities. Federated Hermes provides stability and downside protection through its defensive, value-oriented approach, while Fidelity captures growth opportunities with its dynamic, quality-driven philosophy. Their minimal overlap in holdings and low style correlation enhance diversification, ensuring resilience across market cycles. This thoughtful blend of capital preservation and growth potential delivers a robust platform for long-term success in the region.
