Investment Adviser's Market Commentary

Markets faced a mix of political and economic challenges in February. In the US, Donald Trump implemented a series of executive orders that significantly impacted global trade and geopolitics. The US stock market has fallen 4.7% since Trump's inauguration, driven largely by concerns around tariff announcements. In contrast, European markets rose over 4.5% during the same period, helped by the hope of potential peace in Ukraine and the relative affordability of European stocks. Our portfolios continue to be overweight Europe compared to the global benchmark, while the US remains our largest single allocation.

Interest rates were also in focus. The Bank of England cut interest rates by 0.25% but warned that inflation could persist in the UK during the first half of 2025. In the US, the Federal Reserve raised similar concerns, noting that new trade policies could push prices up. To manage this risk in our portfolios, we've been focusing on bonds with lower interest rate sensitivity.

In Germany, elections saw gains from the far-right Alternative for Germany (AfD) party, but strong results for centrist parties suggests a stable dual-party coalition government is possible. This political stability has helped boost confidence in European stock markets.

Fund In Focus

Pictet Water

A concentrated global equity fund focused on companies offering solutions to global water challenges.

Urbanization, population growth and climate change are placing growing pressure on global water resources. This fund seeks out companies aiming to address this challenge through water supply, treatment and distribution, wastewater treatment and water quality monitoring.

When assessed against the planetary boundaries framework, the fund manager's analysis finds that companies within the fund have a positive impact on freshwater use, eutrophication and chemical pollution.
