Through May, global equity markets rebounded strongly, buoyed by easing trade tensions and improving consumer sentiment. Developed market stocks outperformed their emerging market counterparts, led by gains from U.S. markets, and from the U.S. technology sector in particular, with the Nasdaq index gaining 8.1%, in GBP.

U.S. trade negotiations continued between the White House and other key global governments, with significant progress made between the U.S. and the E.U., while a mid-month trade truce between the U.S. and China helped fuel gains across risk assets.

While trade tariffs remain the focal point of President Trump's economic agenda, early sightings of his budget reconciliation bill point to new tax and regulatory changes that will help boost the U.S. domestic business landscape – a development that proved positive for small cap stocks through the month.

Elsewhere, both European and U.K. equities posted gains, with upward earnings revisions helping underpin confidence in the European equity market. Within the U.K., GDP data surprised to the upside, while announcements of trade deals with India and the U.S. further added to optimism. However, inflation in the region remains stubbornly high, and fears are mounting over government borrowing levels.

Across bond markets, the picture was more challenging, as concerns over fiscal deficits in both the U.S. and U.K. pushed up long-dated yields, weighing heavily on government bond prices. Improving trade tensions helped buoy returns from credit markets, with the global high yield index benefitting from a brighter growth outlook and eking out a gain of 1.6%, however, broad weakness in government bonds led the global aggregate index to close the month down 0.5%.

Commodity markets also struggled. Gold was especially weak through the period, falling 0.9%, as investors capitalised on falling recessionary fears by shifting capital way from defensive assets. Other alternative asset classes, notably property and infrastructure, benefitted from the improving appetite, posting gains.

Looking ahead, unpredictable trade policies, ongoing inflationary pressures, and divergent fiscal responses are expected to sustain market volatility. Investors are advised to focus on diversification across geographies and asset classes while maintaining flexibility to adapt to evolving conditions.

Against this backdrop the portfolios gained, with clean energy and U.S. stocks driving growth. Having had a trickier month through April, our U.S. equity allocations rebounded strongly, with the Amundi MSCI USA SRI Climate Paris Aligned fund gaining 5.9%, while the U.S. heavy Vanguard ESG Screened Developed World All Cap Equity Index added 5.1%. In both cases, ESG related tilts benefitted. However, it was our holding in the L&G Clean Energy UCITS ETF that was the standout performer, gaining 9.8%, in what was its best month in well over a year. Elsewhere, returns from our other equity strategies were generally positive, albeit our underweight to the U.S. detracted from portfolio performance as a whole. Fixed income allocations provided mixed returns, with exposure to green bonds and short duration credit outperforming. Overall, our tilt towards corporate bonds over government bonds added value. Within alternatives, our holding in the WisdomTree Core Physical Gold pared back some of its recent gains, falling 1.7%. We do however still believe there is value to be had from retaining the exposure.
