Portfolio Managers Market Commentary

Through May, global equity markets rebounded strongly, buoyed by easing trade tensions and improving consumer sentiment. Developed market stocks outperformed their emerging market counterparts, led by gains from U.S. markets, and from the U.S. technology sector in particular, with the Nasdaq index gaining 8.1%, in GBP.

U.S. trade negotiations continued between the White House and other key global governments, with significant progress made between the U.S and the E.U., while a mid-month trade truce between the U.S. and China helped fuel gains across risk assets.

While trade tariffs remain the focal point of President Trump's economic agenda, early sightings of his budget reconciliation bill point to new tax and regulatory changes that will help boost the U.S. domestic business landscape – a development that proved positive for small cap stocks through the month.

Elsewhere, both European and U.K. equities posted gains, with upward earnings revisions helping underpin confidence in the European equity market. Within the U.K., GDP data surprised to the upside, while announcements of trade deals with India and the U.S. further added to optimism. However, inflation in the region remains stubbornly high, and fears are mounting over government borrowing levels.

Across bond markets, the picture was more challenging, as concerns over fiscal deficits in both the U.S. and U.K. pushed up long-dated yields, weighing heavily on government bond prices. Improving trade tensions helped buoy returns from credit markets, with the global high yield index benefitting from a brighter growth outlook and eking out a gain of 1.6%, however, broad weakness in government bonds led the global aggregate index to close the month down 0.5%.

Commodity markets also struggled. Gold was especially weak through the period, falling 0.9%, as investors capitalised on falling recessionary fears by shifting capital way from defensive assets. Other alternative asset classes, notably property and infrastructure, benefitted from the improving appetite, posting gains.

Looking ahead, unpredictable trade policies, ongoing inflationary pressures, and divergent fiscal responses are expected to sustain market volatility. Investors are advised to focus on diversification across geographies and asset classes while maintaining flexibility to adapt to evolving conditions.

Against this backdrop the portfolios gained, with U.S. and clean energy stocks driving growth. Having struggled through recent times, the Schroder Global Alternative Energy fund experienced a strong early month bounce, benefitting from renewed hopes of global growth, ultimately closing May up 8.7%. Recently added Brown Advisory US Sustainable Growth also exhibited above benchmark returns, adding 8.4%, with good returns from technology and cyclical stocks helping boost performance. Elsewhere, returns from our other equity strategies were positive, albeit our underweight to U.S. equities detracted from portfolio performance as a whole. Across our fixed income allocations, overweight positions in credit versus government bonds benefitted, as did out underweight to duration. Exposure to alternative assets also benefitted.

Fund In Focus

Templeton Global Climate Change

This global equity strategy from Franklin Templeton offers a unique approach to investing in the climate change theme. With a clear exclusionary framework in place, the focus of the fund is on finding companies that provide solutions to mitigate and adapt to climate change, as well as those that are actively adapting their business models to be more resilient in the face of climate change and resource depletion.

What makes this solution particularly interesting is its overweight position in peer leading companies within the materials sector – a segment of the market that is essential to the energy transition, but often overlooked by sustainable equity funds.

By tackling the more difficult parts of the market in a way that is credible, transparent, and remains true to their sustainability targets, the team at Franklin Templeton have been able to create a strategy that sits apart from peers, in a market that often lacks genuine diversification. Going forward, the Fairstone Environmental portfolios will undoubtedly benefit from having exposure to this fund and the market leading companies that it holds.
